The research effort was divided into three major program areas: 1) monitoring of water quality and contaminant levels in biota to identify contaminants of concern and assess field-level exposure, 2) toxicological assessment of drainwater contaminants using fish and invertebrates in a battery of laboratory and on-site tests, and 3) field and laboratory bioaccumulation studies to evaluate the role of the food chain in the transport, chemical speciation, and biological cycling of contaminants. The results of these studies provide critical information regarding the hazard of irrigation drainage to aquatic life in California and other western states, as well as the validity of current and proposed water quality criteria for specific irrigation drainwater contaminants. Water Quality Monitoring and Contaminants in Biota Field surveys of water quality and contaminant levels were made during the fall (September-December) and spring (February-May) in twenty-seven locations encompassing the San Joaquin and Sacramento Rivers, and their tributaries. Results of these surveys indicated that as many as seven chemical constituents were of concern (selenium, boron, molybdenum, chromium, copper, mercury, zinc). However, due to funding limitations, selenium, boron, and molybdenum were given priority in the detailed surveys of water quality and food-chain residues.
