Not illustrated. 1852 Excerpt: .to introduce, after having given Mr. B. s newspaper extracts upon Economy, the above specimens of a large heart, and freedom of expenditure, which equally sprang from the same rectified spirit; but I half regret not having given, first, more explicitly, his personal views in regard to the lavish expenditure, and what he thought disgraceful luxury, so frequent among us. Let a more rational and christian life be sanctioned, by the practice of some of our first and most authentic men and women, he would say, and how many individuals might be stimulated by the consciousness of greater means at their command, which this course would insure to them, to devise and act upon plans for ameliorating the condition of the unfortunate, and of relieving the poor! In this connection, I will relate an anecdote respecting a friend of my brother, whose conduct, daring the Embargo of 1812, manifested this noble independence of character, and illustrated the beautiful and beneficial results accruing therefrom. When the pressure in money matters occurred on account of the Embargo in 1812, this gentleman judged it right to lessen his family expenditures by nearly two thousand dollars per annum for those years; which included of course the sacrifice of luxuries and many pleasures, to himself, wife, and family, all of which were cheerfully acquiesced in; while both husband and wife decided, that not one cent should be withdrawn from the sum of six hundred dollars, which they had been in the...
