Excerpt: .but the area is-so small, that it has more the appearance of a well than the court of an edifice. In this building is the assembly-room, sixty-five feet by twenty-five, handsomely fitted up; but the music-gallery ar one end is a mere over-grown shelf; the common blunder in nine assembly-rooms out of ten. The card room is preposterous; a narrow flip of about eleven feet wide; so that Lilliputian card tables must be made on purpose for the room, or no passage re-, main around them for spectators. From the cupola on the top of the building is a very fine view of the town. The The new church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a building that does credit to the town: It stands in the centre of a square, so that you may view it to much better advantage than its namesake at...
