Come, grandmother, sit down and tell a little story to my darling. When figure 4 has been obtained from the former, the mother may continue: Oh, what a nice chair for my little pet! And here is another for little sister. Come, sister (changing the form to figure 1), and have some dinner; come, the table is set. Figure 10 or 11 may be enlivened with words like these: From this well, papa gets water, when he is thirsty. Mamma gets water from it for her flowers or to wash her little pet. Or figure 12: Here comes the cow with her little calf, to drink water from the trough: they are so thirsty! How glad they are to get a drink! Now they have enough, and go away. And here comes John with two horses; he wants to let them drink, too. Two fingers of the right hand may represent cow and calf; and three fingers of the left hand, John and the two horses. As a model story for somewhat more advanced children, I offer the following, suggested by Froebel, for figures 13 and 14: Father gave Freddie leave to pluck some cherries from the tree in the garden. Freddie got the heavy house-ladder (figure 13) from the barn; but when he wanted to raise it and lean it against the tree, it fell and broke to pieces. See, there it falls and breaks! Frank, the gardener, saw this, and...
